Inside, the thoughtful floorplan gives everyone somewhere to go. A separate formal lounge at the front of the home offers a quiet adults' retreat, while the main living area flows through to a light-filled meals space with a cosy slow-combustion fireplace, the heart of the home through the cooler Hunter months. Beyond that, a huge family room and a separate dining area, both wrapped in bay windows overlooking the yard, give the kids and teenagers space of their own without living on top of each other.

Now to the part that will sell this home. Beyond the attached double garage with internal access, a colossal 13m x 9m Colorbond garage and workshop sits at the rear of the block, complete with three roller doors and an adjoining 5m x 9m carport. Boats, caravans, camper trailers, the project car, the trailer, the trade gear; it all fits, under cover, with drive-through access across the block and room to spare. Tradespeople, mechanics, collectors and weekend adventurers, take note: sheds of this scale rarely come to market.

Outside the shed, the fully fenced yard is level, low-maintenance and genuinely usable, with a paved entertaining area right off the living space for weekend barbecues while the kids and dogs run free on the lawn. There is even room for a pool, a cubby, a trampoline and a veggie patch, all at once.

All of this in Paxton, where you are walking distance to the local primary school, general store, bowling club and the iconic Paxton pub.
