Drysdale Area

Not long-ago Drysdale was a quiet rural township located on Port Phillip Bay midway between Geelong and the resort town of Queenscliff. Today it is a busy township just a short distance from Geelong that offers a seaside alternative to living in a busy city. The township has proved popular with commuters and has a large central shopping district, a Primary school and Secondary College with Deakin University Geelong campus easily accessed by car and bus. Popular with middle-aged Australians the local area boasts a golf course and other sports facilities for residents and holiday makers alike enjoying easy access to popular surf beaches, historic sites, and the Great Ocean Road.

It includes a terminal station of the famous Bellarine Peninsular Railway which offers tourists a hint of the past with it scenic route through the countryside.
