Build, Escape or Invest on 12.09 Hectares at Towrang

Set on approximately 12.09 hectares (almost 30 acres) north of Goulburn, 350 Towrang Road brings together space, position and infrastructure that is already in the ground.

The land is mostly cleared with scattered timber through it, divided into two paddocks and carrying a seasonal creek. Fencing and drainage have both been updated by the current owner, so a good deal of the groundwork has already been taken care of. A dam sits on the property as well, adding to the water available on site.

The standout improvement is the 16 metre x 7.5 metre (120 square metre) shed, with power connected and rainwater harvested off the shed roof into the 22,500 litre water tank alongside it. The tank is plumbed to the shed and needs only a pump to put it to work. For a buyer thinking long term, that infrastructure offers a genuine head start toward converting the shed into a dwelling, subject to council approval (STCA).

Two shipping containers also stay with the property, one fully enclosed and one open sided, giving you lockable storage and a covered work area from day one.

Importantly, the block carries a dwelling entitlement, so you can build with confidence, whether the plan is the dream home, a weekend getaway or simply securing a well held parcel of land north of town.

Position is the other drawcard. Towrang sits within easy reach of the Hume Highway, putting Goulburn just 12 minutes away and Campbelltown around 90 minutes. Close enough to commute or run up for the weekend, far enough to have room to move.

The Main Southern railway line runs nearby, which may appeal if you have a train enthusiast in the family.
