House 4 2 2

BUILT FOR REAL LIFE, CUL-DE-SAC LOCATION

Some homes feel like they were designed by people who have actually met families before. Maybe even lived with them. This is one of those homes. Tucked away in a quiet cul-de-sac, this 4-bedroom, 2-bathroom Huntingdale home leans into easy family living with big open spaces, multiple living zones and a modern floorplan that understands the difference between "open plan" and "everyone permanently living on top of each other." Meaning nobody has to conduct important life business from the kitchen bench while someone else is trying to air fry nuggets three feet away.

By Appointment.

The main living area opens up under high ceilings with modern downlights helping brighten the space, while timber laminate floors bring warmth and a bit of contemporary style. The kitchen sits right in the centre of it all, overlooking the family and dining areas with a large breakfast bar, walk-in pantry, dishwasher and modern appliances all playing their part quietly and efficiently in the background.

Then there's the theatre room. Fully enclosed behind French doors with a recessed ceiling that gives it a slight dramatic edge. Great for movie nights, sport, gaming or pretending you're only going to watch one episode before somehow binging the entire season.

The master suite is another standout. Genuinely spacious, with a large walk-in robe tucked neatly behind its own door and an ensuite complete with double vanity, full-sized bath, enclosed shower and private toilet. The secondary bedrooms are all comfortably sized with double built-in robes, while the nearby activity room makes a handy study nook, reading corner or toy room depending on which season of parenting you're currently in.
