The original Utz Sanby design has since been substantially renovated by Esquisse Design Studio. This is a home architecturally designed for entertaining with its crisp white interior deferring to the azure-blue of the Tasman Sea beyond. The building features two glass and steel capped pavilions, framing a protected central entertaining courtyard, with bedrooms privately located above and below across three luxurious levels.

The residence is comprised of a series of fluid living spaces all visually and spatially connected, yet also providing the flexibility of discreet and private areas for families and guests. The main living area in the lower pavilion opens completely on both sides with glass doors which slide away to form a continuous entertaining platform, from the sitting areas of the upper pavilion to the balcony overlooking Palm Beach. Ideal for capturing the cool sea breezes in summer, but equally enchanting when closed and basked in winter sun.

- The elegant finishes feature travertine stone flooring to the main living areas, and a fully equipped Miele kitchen with stunning Italian Calacutta marble island bench.

- Five king size bedrooms with limestone ensuites, each designed for sumptuous comfort and all opening directly to balconies, terraces or gardens with ocean views.

- Fully self-contained ground floor with a media room, wet-bar and two ensuite bedrooms, and seamlessly connects to level lawns, infinity pool and those sensational coastal views.

- Northeast aspect, shimmering views across Barrenjoey Headland to Central Coast

- Floor-to-ceiling glazing blurs distinction between indoors and out

- Pavilion design offers maximum privacy to owners and their guests
